ANNUAL REPORT 2018
ArtsWave.org

creating community through the arts

ArtsWave fuels Cincinnati's growth as a recognized leader, continuous innovator and the nation's largest community campaign for the arts. Attracting national acclaim and driving tourism, our arts connect us as a community and create a more vibrant regional economy. Each year, ArtsWave supports over 100 arts organizations, school outreach programs, festivals and neighborhood arts activities through impact-based grants. Funding for these programs comes not from taxes, levies or government agencies, but from tens of thousands of ArtsWave donors across the region, each adding to the arts ripple effect.

Together we make waves.

WE ARE THE ARTS

ALECIA KINTNER
President & CEO

Riding a wave of community impact through the arts.

From being named a top-10 destination by The New York Times, thanks to our new and renewed cultural facilities, to the subsequent New York Times headline, “The Arts are Flourishing in Cincinnati,” it’s been a year to celebrate the impact of the arts.

It’s also been a year to thank our community. 2018 marks the fifth year in the row that more than $12 million has been raised for the arts regionally. No other city across the country has a track record like this. Once again, ArtsWave is the nation’s largest community campaign for the arts, both in total contributions, at $12.2 million, and number of donors, nearly 40,000.

Special thanks goes to Duke Energy’s Jim Henning for chairing the 2018 Campaign, and to ArtsWave’s Board of Directors, led by Teresa Tanner of Fifth Third Bank. Much appreciation also goes to the many cabinet members, board leaders, arts partners and donors for the important role they played.

In 2018, ArtsWave focused on two key goals: growing gifts from individuals and leveraging innovative strategies. Matching grants from the Luther Foundation and Duke Energy Foundation were critical in developing these strategies. A variety of new donor benefits were offered that together resulted in almost $250,000 in new revenue. This year, we also introduced the networking group ArtsWave Pride, which grew within a few months to nearly 1,500 individuals and $258,000 in gifts.

Beyond dollars raised, the 2018 Community Campaign highlighted the array, depth and importance of the region’s arts. This was exemplified by the all-new event series, ArtsWave Days, brought to you by Macy’s, which included 100+ free performances at nearly 40 locations each Saturday during the 12-week fund drive. The fifth anniversary of CincySings, brought to you by Accenture, engaged 25 choral groups across regional employers with 1,000 in attendance at the event and another 2,600 watching on Cincinnati.com. Toast to the Arts featured a variety of wine, beer and cocktail promotions held at 30+ local establishments, including our very own MAKE WAVES beer by Braxton Brewing Company.

As ArtsWave celebrates its 91st year, our commitment to a vibrant community through the arts remains stronger than ever, just like our early founders Anna Sinton Taft and Charles P. Taft imagined.

Together we make waves.

2018 OUTCOMES: THE ARTS...

Put Cincinnati On The Map

Talented workers, visitors and businesses are drawn to our region's innovative arts.

It's been a year of unprecedented national and international media attention driven by our arts. October 2017 saw the biggest arts event in Cincinnati history, BLINK, a 20-block light and art festival that drew more than one million people downtown. The Cincinnati Symphony Orchestra went abroad, touring Europe and Asia. Afterwards, the CSO, Cincinnati Pops Orchestra, Cincinnati Ballet, Cincinnati Opera and May Festival opened seasons in the gloriously restored, state-of-the-art Music Hall. The opening of Music Hall brought praise from the Editorial Board of The New York Times. Ensemble Theatre Cincinnati, long a cornerstone in the now-thriving Over-the-Rhine neighborhood, completed a major expansion as well. Cincinnati Shakespeare Company opened its best-in-class, brand new theater with a critically-acclaimed season and, later in the year, hosted the International Shakespeare Association Conference. However you look at it, Cincinnati punches far above its weight for richness and vibrancy in its arts.

- Cincinnati's arts garnered over 230 million impressions in national media.
- Fall arts marketing — through ArtsWave partnering with the Cincinnati USA Regional Tourism Network — has yielded $116 million in incremental revenues for the region over the past two years.
- Tens of thousands throughout the region attended community open houses for new cultural facilities through ArtsWave.

The 52 Places Traveler: The Arts Are Flourishing in Cincinnati

From public murals to renovated concert halls, our columnist finds a city bursting with cultural options. Here's what you need to know to experience it for yourself.

Bridge Cultural Divides

The arts celebrate the diversity of our community.

Last year, we saw the arts bridge cultural divides when Cincinnati Boychoir toured South Africa to gain a deeper insight into history and brought that conversation back home. The Taft Museum of Art's Duncanson Artist-in-Residence Stafford Berry performed with the message, "When we dance together we have no time to hate." Bi-Okoto Drum & Dance Theatre collaborated with NrityArpana School for Performing Arts to present a community festival showcasing the connection between African and Indian cultures through dance, music and folk stories. Through the arts, Cincinnatians have unique opportunities to bridge cultural divides.

- 67% believe the arts unify our communities, regardless of age, race and ethnicity.
- 62% agree the arts "help me understand other cultures."

Fuel Creativity and Learning

The arts have the power to transform learning of core curriculum and essential skills such as creativity and critical thinking.

Over the past year, The Carnegie partnered with Northern Kentucky Schools, including all public schools in Covington, to provide arts education that wouldn't have happened otherwise. Elementz partnered with Cincinnati Public Schools to introduce creative opportunities within local companies as part of developing future young professionals. More than 1,800 students took part in 20 weeks of tuition-free classes from Cincinnati Ballet, resulting in increased self-confidence and self-awareness along with new movement skills. Over 30,000 children began their school day through the combination of classical music and mindfulness activities, creating calmness and balance, through City Silence.

- ArtsWave provided funding for arts in nearly 550 schools in 15 counties including 100% of CPS Schools.
- 235,000 arts education experiences were provided last year through ArtsWave funding, a 27% increase over 2017.
- Creativity is one of the top five skills sought by business leaders.

Deepen Roots in Our Region

The arts are a critical tool for the retention of a talented workforce, today and in the future.

Last year, the Cincinnati Chamber Orchestra saw increased young professional attendance at their Summermusik series thanks to creative programming and partnerships with local restaurants and breweries. The May Festival recruited a Community Chorus of over 200 members from 79 different neighborhoods, giving each singer the opportunity to take part in one of the country's oldest music traditions. concert.nova engaged young professionals with mentoring programs for musicians, as well as a series of concerts at casual venues to break down barriers to chamber music.

Melodic Connections hosted six "Beers and Beats" events last year, designed to engage and include young adults of various developmental abilities through drum circles.

- Hamilton County is one of only three counties in Ohio that has become younger over the past seven years, with an influx of young professionals.

Source: U.S. Census

- Those most satisfied with the region participate in the arts 19% more than the average Cincinnati.

Enliven Neighborhoods

Community arts centers, galleries and public art build pride-of-place for residents.

In Hamilton, three new murals from the Fitton Center for Creative Arts and the City of Hamilton's partnership, Streetspark, were unveiled, bringing with them light, color and a renewed sense of community pride. Cincinnati Landmark Productions continued progress on the Madcap Education Center in Westwood, the third major arts anchor CLP has developed for the West side. The Public Arts Network of Northern Kentucky partnered with 73 organizations from 23 zip codes to design and create picnic tables to be delivered across Northern Kentucky. Know Theatre of Cincinnati activated Over-The-Rhine for 13 days, drawing thousands to 100+ performances during the Cincy Fringe Festival.

- ArtsWave-funded organizations produced 1,000+ arts experiences outside traditional venues.
- Arts events receiving ArtsWave support inspired audiences of more than 2 million.
