

For the Arts. For ALL.

Funding Arts. Fueling Community.

What do the arts do?

The arts are vital to the health of our region and to each of us individually. ArtsWave donors have given hundreds of thousands of gifts over decades, laying a foundation for resiliency today. In fact, the Cincinnati region was just named one of the most "arts vibrant" in the U.S. Our quality of life and economic competitiveness are direct reflections of that vibrancy. Our arts are essential!

How have arts organizations shifted to inspire and heal our community?

Now more than ever, the arts matter. They offer hope and promise for our region's future. During the crisis...

- Cincinnati Symphony Orchestra musicians played in local food banks, nourishing the spirits of those in need.
- Warsaw Federal Incline Theater presented Open Air Cabarets to engage audiences in a safe, outdoor space.
- Cincinnati Art Museum shifted temporarily to digital and outdoor programming, opening its new nine-story hillside Art Climb for all to enjoy.
- Cincinnati Ballet brought virtual dance lessons to our living rooms, helping us stay active and connected.
- Young Professionals Choral Collective, The Carnegie and Cincinnati Boychoir lined the Purple People Bridge, singing "Bridge Over Troubled Water."
- and so much more...!

How are we advancing social justice, equity and inclusion?

- ArtsWave funded $730,000 in Black and Brown artists and arts organizations over the past year and launched Flow, an African American Arts Experience.
- We compensated local artists of color to create Cincinnati's "Black Lives Matter" mural, the Cincinnati Music Festival Outdoor Museum and the recent "Black & Brown Faces" exhibition.
- We're incentivizing the creation of diversity, equity and inclusion plans by grant recipients, so that intentional action becomes a measurable hallmark of our sector.

Why give now?

The past year has brought unprecedented disruption to the arts, with drastic reductions to audience capacity still in effect for theaters and groups. Ingenuity abounds as organizations change in response. But, a successful re-start in the arts will only be possible with the continued contributions of ArtsWave donors like you. A gift to the arts is an investment in Greater Cincinnati and its future!
